Dear Mayor and Commissioners:

The National Trust for Historic Preservation is pleased to express its strong support for the restoration of historic Miami Marine Stadium, an iconic civic landmark of national architectural and cultural significance.

The National Trust is one of the nation's leading preservation organizations and, for more than 75 years, has worked to protect and activate historic places that tell America's story. We are a privately funded nonprofit organization whose work includes advocacy, stewardship, and education, and we own and operate 27 historic sites open to the public across the country.

Miami Marine Stadium has been a long-standing priority for the National Trust. In 2009, the Stadium was included on our annual 11 Most Endangered Historic Places list, and in 2011 it was designated as one of the first sites in our National Treasures program. Over the years, we have supported a range of initiatives to promote awareness of the Stadium's architectural importance and cultural legacy, including exhibitions, public programs, and national media coverage.

The historic Stadium has consistently generated strong public interest and enthusiasm from people across the nation, which we view as a positive indicator of its long-term viability. Its unique design, local authorship, and deep cultural associations align closely with the National Trust's preservation mission.

We are proud to have supported this effort for many years and are encouraged by the City of Miami's continued leadership in advancing the restoration of this nationally significant site.

Sincerely,
